PORTO RICO

Development Since American Troops Landed There is Most Wonderful.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 22.—When our troops landed in Porto Rico in 1898 that island was practically unknown to the American public and at that time the most optimistic could not have anticipated the spontaneous development which has actually taken place in the last 15 years. This development, industrial, educational and otherwise, is shown in an interesting volume issued by the Bureau of Insular Affairs containing the reports of the governors and other officials for the fiscal years 1913.

This report shows since 1901 the total external commerce of the island has increased some five-fold, in round numbers the exports growing from eight and a half millions to 49 millions; the imports from less than nine to nearly 37 millions; while the balance of trade, adverse in 1901 by a small amount, is now more than 12 millions annually in its favor. The island during the last year imported American merchandise at the rate of more than $100,000 for each working day.

Although sugar amounted to more than half the total exports, or $26,619,158, an increase made possible only by the influx of American capital and machinery, together with the exceptionally favorable underlying conditions, more interest attaches to the fact that Porto Rican coffee, of whose excellence every native is proud, has shown a proportionately more rapid increase than sugar during the last five years, the exports for 1913 being $8,511,316, an increase of 26 per cent over the preceding year. Proof that the introduction of a diversified agriculture has been laid is found in the increase of oranges, pineapples, grapefruit, and other fruit from a total of $109,801 in 1901 to $2,377,762 in 1912 and $3,120,015 last year.

Speaking of the closing year of his administration, Governor Colton says it has been one of marked development, with industries more productive than ever before, and willing labor closely employed under improving conditions.

It is stated that in 1898 there was but one building in the islands especially erected for school purposes, the total enrollment of the public schools was but 26,000, and 80 per cent of the entire population was unable to read or write. A million souls with this high percentage of illiteracy were domiciled within 3,600 square miles, a population more dense than that of any part of the United States except a few manufacturing districts.

Instead of one school house erected for that purpose, there are today

105 graded school buildings, many of which compare favorably with the better class of school buildings in the cities of the United States, and 264 rural school buildings. The school enrollment has increased to 161,785 and the general percentage of illiteracy has been reduced to 66 percent.

In the schools special attention is being paid to practical courses. Among the night schools, numbering 293, academic courses have been the rule, but last winter in San Juan a night trade school with classes in carpentry, brick laying, plumbing and automobile mechanics was attended with such interest manifested that, in view of the local scarcity of such workmen, the establishment of similar schools at other places will be better.

The people have responded magnificently to their opportunities and the inspiration of educational advancement is obvious throughout the island.

No less than 190,000 cases of uncinariasis (hookworm) have been treated, from which approximately 60,000 complete cures have been effected. Steady progress is being made in improving the general health as shown in the decrease in the death rate from 24.02 per thousand during the previous year to 22.25 per thousand.

An improvement in the general appearance and sanitary conditions in most of the municipalities is evident, while the development of public works is apparent in better streets, water supplies, sewer systems, hospitals and otherwise.

The finances of the Porto Rican government are reported to be in excellent shape, and as practically all of the property tax goes to the support of municipal governments and school boards, the increase in assessed valuation from less than $0 million in 1905 to $179,271,023 in 1913 has greatly improved the financial condition of the various towns. In addition, the legislature has provided means for municipal loans so that, in addition to the valuable local improvements made in recent years, applications from municipalities for loans for other public works aggregating some four and a half millions are now under consideration.

The public works undertaken by the insular government have resulted in a system of modern highways totaling 1070 kilometers and in an irrigation system which will make 40,000 acres of semi-arid fertile land among the most productive and dependable in the island.

Governor Colton in closing his report says, respecting the amendment of the organic act:

"The point is not far distant after reaching which internal enterprise, stimulated by improved health conditions and the influence of the public schools, will become a potent factor in developing the people of Porto Rico as a whole into a sound body politic."

Can you imagine how poor an impression is made on a business man by a work-hunter who personally comes to his office (merely in the course of random looking around) and asks for employment? Nowadays there are just two ways of reaching possible employers. One is to answer their "help and wanted" ads. in the Daily Telegram. The other is to get them to answer your "situation wanted" ad. Both methods are open to you.

GOOD WELL

Is Drilled by W. Brent Maxwell, of this City, on His Own Farm.

On the West Fork river, Sardis district, this county, W. Brent Maxwell has drilled No. 14 on his own farm through the Gordon sand and has a thirty barrel producer. On Ten Mile creek in the same district, the Hope Natural Gas Company has drilled its test on the D. O. Allen farm through all sands including the Bayard and has a gusher.

Gas wells are the result of late completions in Lewis county. In Court House district, the Reserve Gas Company has drilled No. 1, George Merts, No. 1 J. B. Huey and No. 1 G. W. Neely farms through the Fifth sand and all are gassers. In Freedom's creek district the same company is due in the sand at a test on the J. M. Beechley farm. On Mill Fork, Over district, Braxton county, the Turney-Erwin Oil & Gas Company is starting a second test on the Pauline E. Snodgrass farm.

Canada is nearly 30 times as large as Great Britain and Ireland, the total area of the Dominion being only 237,000 square miles less than the whole continent of Europe.
